

Robert Half selected by Forbes as one of the World's Top Companies for Women 2026

TORONTO, ON — Global talent solutions and business consulting firm Robert Half (NYSE: RHI) has been named one of Forbes' World's Top Companies for Women 2026, recognizing the company's commitment to helping women build successful careers, advance into leadership roles and make a lasting impact.

Across Robert Half, women play a vital role in driving the company forward, shaping strategy, leading teams and delivering exceptional results for clients and candidates. They serve on the Board of Directors, as company officers and in leadership roles across the organization. Their expertise, perspectives and accomplishments are central to the company's success.

Forbes and Statista developed this year's ranking using feedback from more than 140,000 women across 61 countries, along with women's representation in executive and board positions. The evaluation considers workplace conditions, pay equity and opportunities for advancement, as well as company reputation, public perceptions of gender equality and women's representation in leadership positions.

"We are proud to once again be recognized among the world's top companies for women," said M. Keith Waddell, President and Chief Executive Officer of Robert Half. "Women's leadership, expertise and contributions are integral to Robert Half's success. This recognition celebrates their impact and our focus on creating a workplace where women can build successful careers, grow and lead."

Robert Half's commitment comes to life through comprehensive benefits, career development opportunities and employee networks. The company offers programs, resources and benefits designed to support employees throughout their careers and across different stages of life. These include a robust suite of family-focused benefits, including infertility treatment and child and elder care support. Its Global Women's Employee Network (GWEN) helps women and allies across the organization connect, learn and grow.

"When employees feel supported both personally and professionally, they are better positioned to reach their full potential," said JoLynn Conway-James, Senior Executive Director and Chief Administrative Officer at Robert Half. "Our professional development programs, employee networks and family-focused resources are designed to help the women in our workforce expand their opportunities and grow their careers."

Robert Half has also been recognized by Forbes as one of the World's Best Employers 2026.
